Using Flipgrid - It is useful for someone who wants to express themselves by talking rather by writing

Brave Vulnerable Exposed

Here are two suggestions about how the teacher could make the lesson better in the future. 1. Maybe a faster pace. 2. slow the lesson down therefore we reckon the pace must have been just about right!

What I liked most about this lesson was that the interactive parts really held my attention.

On using Moodle quizzes - more engaging because we had to do the work rather than listening only

What I did not like about this lesson was my hair looked like a crow's nest and i couldn't smoke.

I enjoyed this class because I felt involved

"The polls during the videos to test you"

Because I did the work on my phone in class I could do it at home as well

I liked working in a group because I felt I could discuss my point of view

The interactive aspect of the class meant that we all got to interact in the same lessons via a fun quiz. The quiz aspect of the game gave us an opportunity to solidify the information we had learned. It was all in all very well organised and fun

Jasmine Harte,
2nd year Social Care
student, CDCFE, on her experience of being part of UDL implementation in her classes

The students also learned how to implement UDL in their own social care practice, to engage more of their clients

Jasmine's teachers got the Social Care
students to teach other staff about UDL!

The students were partners in learning with their teachers as they "worked out" UDL and what it means to and for them
